Bottle Containing Visiting Cards Found by a Native Off Mana, Kauai.

The Advertiser received word yesterday from N. Mejdell of Mana, Kauai, that during the latter part of last month an old native found a bottle drifting in the sea off Mana, which contained the following orthodox visiting cards:

Mr. Samuel Howard Fisher,
United States Army.
Wylie T. Conway,
United States Army.

There was also found in the bottle the following business card:
Harry E. Corbett,
64 Ellis Street,
San Francisco.

Harry Corbett is a brother of J. J. Corbett, ex-champion heavyweight pugilist of the world. His place on Ellis street is one of the best known sporting resorts on the Pacific Coast.

Just where the bottle was committed to the deep is problematical, but it was doubtless somewhere between here and San Francisco. For years a well-defined current has been casting articles of northern origin on the coasts of Kauai. Sticks of Oregon pine, the appearance of which greatly puzzled the natives, are mentioned in the traditions of the Hawaiian people. The bell buoy which is now stationed off Honolulu broke loose somewhere off the mouth of the Columbia river, and after a prolonged drift, finally stranded on the Island of Kauai several years ago. Several years ago the derelict schooner Nomad, which came the same route as the bell buoy, and which also found a resting place on the shore of the Garden Isle, furnishes another striking instance of the operation of the current which probably brought the bottle containing the cards to Kauai.

Collector Upheld.

Collector Stackable received an opinion from the Treasury Department last week regarding drawback on coal used as fuel on board a steam vessel plying between New York and Honolulu. The Collector asked the Attorney General whether Honolulu is a Pacific port of the United States within the meaning of paragraph 415 of the Tariff Act of July 24, 1897, which permits a drawback on coal used as fuel between Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States. The opinion of the Attorney General is to the effect that Honolulu is a Pacific port of the United States within the meaning of the act of July 24, 1897. In an opinion Acting Attorney Dunne considered Honolulu as other than a Pacific port of the United States, but the Collector held to the contrary. Collector Stackable then requested information from Washington regarding the status of this port, more especially with regard to the allowance of coal drawbacks.

ANOTHER BODY FOUND IN HARBOR

Native is Supposed to Have Fallen From Oceanic Wharf While Intoxicated.

Late on Saturday night the dead body of a man was found by a boat-boy, named Andrew Kanana, floating in the water of the harbor, near the Oceanic wharf. The body is that of a native sailor, Waikapa by name.

The body was towed to the boatlanding and the police notified. Afterwards the body was taken to the morgue.

No signs of violence were visible on the body, which had apparently been in the water about two days and the supposition is that the man fell into the water while intoxicated, and was drowned.

On the other hand, it is possible that deceased was a member of the gang of crap-shooters who nightly infest the wharf and that his death may have been the result of an altercation arising out of manipulation of the dice. The matter will be thoroughly probed at the inquest, which is to be held this evening.

The jury is composed as follows: H. W. Kinney, W. F. Sabin, Dr. C. B. High, J. Zablan, Henry Crane, and J. Kuana.

Thomas, Miss Angeline Wohlers, Mrs. Elwell, Lee Shun, Lee Ahong, Thon Tong, Sew Wun, H. Canon and 59 deck.
